Chapter 1 by Drew

It didn't take long to get her to start smiling and laughing at everything I said. She was into it. I could tell right away. She never had an empty glass. I made sure of it.

Chapter 2 by Mia

That she was my cat didn't mean much to me. As long as she laughed at my jokes and drank her kitty milk I couldn't care less. Nobody did really make me smile like she did. Life was kind of ok, just a little tip on the hat. Me and my cat.

Chapter 3 by Mia

Other people didn't understand my need for solitude. Every night me and my cat seeing some netflix movie, or eating shrimps together.

Well, maybe you could understand my irritation when that Hulk-likely dude stood outside on my balcony tapping the window. "Tap, Tap, Tap"

Chapter 4 by Joakim

I opened the window while screaming "what the hell are you doing here?".

The hulk-like guy was taken back. He was not used to be talked to like this. "I have come for the cat! Its very impo..."

I slammed the window close and started dialing 911 while screaming vile things to the idiot outside.

Suddenly...

Chapter 5 by vivek

The Cat jumped out of the cot and out of nowhere barged upon me and was shrieking at the top her voice. I was taken aback by the sudden force on my shoulders and the loud shrieks. She never behaved like this before. I just tried to free myself from her grip and ran towards the door. Then as i reached the end of the hall, i heard shattering of the window glass. I was terribly shocked.

Chapter 6 by Joakim

Moments after, the hulk-like person and the cat was in a huge brawl. I was terrified for my cat but there was something wrong with her.

The cat jumped away from the hulk and started to growl and shake. She was transforming into something else!

Chapter 7 by Joakim

A huge humanoid beast with claws 15 cm long!

Chapter 8 by Hayley

The hulk-creature began to cry. "Fluffy," he said, "don't you remember me?"

"I remember you all too well, Frank," said my cat. "Can't you see I've moved on?"

"But we had such wonderful times together," Frank pleaded. "Hunting, stalking, bathing in the sun. What could you possibly want with this human? It's because I'm so large, isn't it?"

"No, Frank, it's because you're terrified of commitment. I saw the way you were always checking out the werewolves. Always had your eye out for something better, someone younger."

The hulk was now sobbing. "I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

Fluffy came behind me and wrapped her human-like arms around my waist. "Can't you see I am home Frank? If you really love me, you'll leave us alone." She began purring. I stood frozen, unsure of exactly how to pet a 5'7 cat with human limbs. She nuzzled against my neck. I gingerly scratched her between the ears.

Frank watched us for a minute, and he slumped his shoulders. "I see. You're right. I was crazy to come here. I'm sorry, Fluffs."

"It's alright, Frank. We all do crazy things sometimes."

With that, he walked out the broken window and jumped back into the street, accidentally crushing a parked car.

"Well," I said, turning to Fluffy "I guess you're picking the movie tonight. Seriously, what the hell? I thought you were just a regular stray cat?"

"Umm....meow?"
